

MSU Breast Cancer Research Symposium

October 4, 2007

1425 Biomedical Physical Sciences (BPS)

3:30 – 7:00 p.m.

Program

“Three strategies for progesterone-regulated mammary gland proliferation and development”

Sandra Haslam, Ph.D., Department of Physiology,
Breast Cancer and the Environment Research Center,
Michigan State University

“MLK3 serine/threonine kinase signaling in breast cancer”

Kathleen Gallo, Ph.D., Department of Physiology
Michigan State University

“Adolescent and adult consumption of cabbage and breast cancer risk”

Dorothy Pathak, Ph.D., M.S., Department of Epidemiology,
Michigan State University

“Stem cells in breast development and cancer”

Max S. Wicha, MD, Internal Medicine, Division of Hematology/Oncology,
University of Michigan

6:00 – 7:00 p.m.

Poster Session and Refreshments:

Student, Postdoc and Faculty poster presentations on breast cancer and cancer related research are invited to participate in this session. To reserve a 4 x 4 poster display for this session or for additional information please contact Emily Zoeller: E-mail: zoeller@msu.edu Phone: 517-432-8747

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month